Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Princeton College Bulletin, Vol. 4: A Quarterly Record Edited by the President and Members of the Faculty At the beginning of the present College year all of the work of the Department of Analytical Chemistry and Mineralogy was transferred from the School of Science building to the new Chemical Laboratory, which has just been erected by the residuary legatees of Mr. John C. Green, to whose liberality the college owes so much. This fine and convenient building, of which a view is given in this number of the Bulletin, was finished just in time to relieve the crowded condition of the rooms in the School of Science, consequent on the rapid growth of the Scientific Department during the last few years. The Laboratory has entrances both on Nassau and Washington streets, the main entrance being on Nassau street. It is built in the most substantial manner, after designs by the well-known architect, Mr. Richard M. Hunt, of New York, from plans furnished by Prof Cornwall. The basement walls are of light-colored sandstone, and the rest of the building is of selected red brick. The construction throughout is of the most approved fireproof style; the walls being furred with hollow brick, all partitions of brick, and the floor beams of iron. The spaces between these beams are filled with brick arches, carrying a solid layer of concrete, on which rest the wood floors. The ceilings in the upper story are of perforated sheet iron suspended from the roof trusses and carrying the plaster. The floor of the basement is of smooth cement and fine flint concrete, except in the halls and the cloak-room, which are...
